

Pluto gets conditional go-ahead

West Australian Environment Minister David Templeman yesterday said Woodside's $12 billion Pluto gas project could go ahead as long as the company met environmental measures to offset the impact on coral during the dredging process. He said talks with Woodside were under way and an offset package would be reflected in environmental conditions applied to the project before it won final approval.

Andrew Burrell